Case Study

IT Group specialises in IT and telecommunications systems. They have over 20 years' experience of giving oral evidence in the High Court, Magistrates, Crown and County Courts, in connection with company litigation, forensic criminal investigations and patent infringement.

In 2009 IT Group were looking for a solution to their mobile forensic needs as their existing solution was no longer providing leading edge results in every case.

Jason Coyne, a partner at IT Group and one of their most experienced expert witnesses needed to find a tool which he could rely upon to get him the information he needed, quickly and easily with the minimum of effort. He chose XRY from Micro Systemation as his weapon of choice for mobile device forensic investigations.

Jason said "When I saw the XRY case with all the required cables enclosed, I knew this was the complete solution I was looking for. I had recently travelled to a remote location in Ireland only to discover I didn't have the correct cables with me. The XRY Complete package means we now have everything to hand quickly and easily."

More recently that portability and ease of use really came into good effect; when Jason was required to download the contents of a mobile phone in court.

Jason recounts the story:

"I was in Court in London for a civil case and the provenance of some images alleged to have come from a mobile phone were in question. The judge asked me if we could prove their origins and I said that we could, assuming I would have time for analysis after court. Instead the judge turned around and said you have one hour!"

That hour reduced to 15 minutes when they had to wait a further 45 minutes for the witness to recover the mobile from home.

"XRY really helped me to get the results quickly and present them professionally to the court."

"I had 15 minutes to download the contents of this phone and present them to the judge. With XRY I was able to recover 3 deleted images from the handset and show the judge where they had originated from in the XRY report within that time frame"

The key points in this case study are:

- The XRY Device Manual means that users can confidently advise clients in advance, about what data can be expected to be recovered from supported devices
- With the XRY reporting tool, users can create personalised and branded professional reports within seconds
- The XRY Complete solution provides everything an examiner needs on site, so examinations can be done without the need for additional equipment
- XRY Support ensures that you can recover the best possible data from mobile devices

"XRY meets all of our requirements to ensure we can recover the right information at the right time and give our clients the best possible advice"
