Mobile technology changes the world

There are billions of mobile devices such as phones, tablets, GPS units and watches. Even where there are no computers, people use mobiles: in the cities, in the countryside, in deserts and mountains. Wherever we go, whatever we do, we bring our mobile devices.

This is also true for people who break the rules of society. They use mobile devices and that can be a good thing. Mobile technology leaves traces, like digital footprints. These can reveal a hidden world – a fragmented world at times, but a world that points to the truth. It is our task to help our customers search for that truth, in order to make the world a safer place.
